As our lives start to return to some form of normality with shops, cafes, campsites and hotels opening and more opportunities to meet with family and friends I want to remind you that we still need to remain cautious and remember to protect ourselves and the most vulnerable in our communities.

Wellbeing

A thoughtful post this week.... The life cycle of the blackberry – the end berry unrecognisable from the initial bud and the developing stages that it goes through. Sound familiar? Maybe not, let me explain! We are constantly developing and changing inside and out, and the stages we go through lead us to greater goals, which may be very different to where we are at the present. The spaces between the stages are also important, representing that we cannot rush our lives, we are all emerging into beautiful people but all in good time. So the message is to take time to notice where you are in your lifespan development, cherish where you are now and think about where life may take you in the future

I would like you to read the poem below about trying your best at all times. We all have days when we feel that we have so much to do we do not know where to start, but you can only try your best and remain positive at all times.

If you have been inspired by this poem to write your own motivational poem then please send me your work to eshore@ivybidge.devon.sch.uk by Tuesday, 7 July.

I look forward to reading your work.

If you always try your best Then you'll never have to wonder About what you could have done If you'd summoned all your thunder.

And if your best Was not as good As you hoped it would be, You still could say, "I gave today All that I had in me."
